

OFFERER FROM PILES

N. S. Wilbur, Secretary Louisville Base Ball Club, After Ten Years Suffering, Is Cured by Paracamp.

HAD TRIED MANY REMEDIES

N. S. Wilbur, the popular Secretary of the Louisville Base Ball Club, says:

"I was a sufferer from Chronic Piles for a period of ten years or more, and while I used practically all of the known remedies, I received nothing but temporary relief. One night while traveling my suffering became so intense that in desperation I used Paracamp, it being the only preparation that I had with me. I did not think for a moment that I would get relief, but in my condition was willing to try anything. Much to my surprise after the first application my suffering became less, I was able to go to sleep and when I awoke in the morning my pain was all gone. I applied Paracamp two or three times afterwards, but because I experienced any suffering but I feared a return of the pain.

I am glad to state, however, that the trouble has entirely disappeared and I believe myself, for the first time in over ten years cured.

I regard the effect of Paracamp in my case as simply wonderful and would not have believed it possible for a remedy to do what it has done had it not been for my actual experience with the preparation."

Paracamp positively does not contain anything that will injure the most delicate skin. It is a clean, safe, cooling, soothing, application that every one can use every day with pleasing and satisfactory results.

A trial will convince you. So get a bottle of Paracamp to-day from your druggist. We guarantee every bottle to give satisfaction. If it fails to do what we claim, go back to your druggist, the man you know, and get your money. 25c, 50c and $1.00 bottles. The Paracamp Company, Incorporated, Louisville, Kentucky, U. S. A.

CONSTIPATION

"For over nine years I suffered with chronic constipation and during this time I had to take injection of warm water once every 24 hours before I could have an action on my bowels. Happily I tried Cascarets, and today I am a well man. During the nine years before I used Cascarets I suffered untold misery with internal piles. Thanks to you I am free from all this this morning. You can use this in behalf of suffering humanity."

THE REFUGEES

The three stood in consultation upon the poop, glancing back at their pursuer. There could be no doubt that the wind was freshening. It blew briskly in their faces as they looked back, but it was not steady yet, and the boat was rapidly overhauling them. Already they could see the faces of the marines who sat in the stern and the gleam of the lighted linestock which the gunner held in his hand.

"Holla!" cried an officer in excellent English. "Lay her to or we're lost!"

"Who are you, and what do you want?" shouted Ephraim Savage in a voice that might have been heard from the bank.

"We come in the king's name, and we want a party of Huguenots from Paris who came on board of your vessel at Boston."

"Brace back the foreyard and lay her to!" shouted the captain. "Drop a ladder over the side there and look smart. So! Now we are ready for them."

The yard was swung round, and the vessel lay quietly rising and falling on the waves. The boat dashed alongside, her brass cannon trained upon the brigantine, and her squad of marines with their fingers upon their triggers ready to open fire. They grinned and shrugged their shoulders when they saw that their sole opponents were three unarmed men upon the poop. The officer was on deck in an instant, with his drawn sword in his hand.

"Come up, two of you," he cried. "You stand here at the head of the ladder, sergeant. Throw up a rope, and you can fix it to this stanchion. Keep awake down there and be all ready to fire. You come with me, Corporal Le-moine. Who is captain of this ship?"

"I am, sir," said Ephraim Savage submissively.

"You have three Huguenots aboard?"

"Tut, tut, Huguenots, are they? I thought they were very anxious to get away, but as long as they paid their passage it was no business of mine. An old man, his young daughter and a young fellow about your age in some sort of livery."

"In uniform, sir—the uniform of the king's guard. These are the folk I have come for."

"And you wish to take them back?"

"Most certainly."

"The old man is in his bunk asleep, the maid is in a cabin below, and the other is sleeping down the hold."

"Sleeping, you say? We had best surprise him."

"But think you that you dare do it alone? He has no arms, it is true, but he is a well grown young fellow. Will you not have twenty men up from the boat?"

Some such thought had passed through the officer's head, but the captain's remark put him upon his mettle.

"Come with me, corporal," said he. "Down this ladder, you say?"

"Yes, down the ladder and straight on. He lies between those two cloth bales."

Ephraim Savage looked up with a smile playing about the corners of his grim mouth. The wind was whistling now in the rigging, and the stars of the masts were humming like two harp strings. Amos Green lounged beside the French sergeant who guarded the end of the rope ladder, while Tomlinson, the mate, stood with a bucket of water in his hand exchanging remarks in very bad French with the crew of the boat beneath him.

The officer made his way slowly down the ladder which led into the hold. The corporal followed him, and had his chest level with the deck when the other had reached the bottom. It may have been something in Ephraim Savage's face or it may have been the gloom around him which startled the young Frenchman.

"Up again, corporal!" he shouted. "I think that you are best down below."

"And I think that you are best down below, my friend," said the Puritan, who gathered the officer's meaning from his gesture. Putting the sole of his boot against the man's chest, he gave a shove which sent both him and the ladder crashing down on to the officer beneath him. As he did so he blew his whistle, and in a moment the hatched was back in its place and clamped down on each side with iron bars.

The sergeant had swung round at the sound of the crash, but Amos Green, who had waited for the movement, threw his arms round him and hurled him overboard into the sea. At the same instant the connecting rope was severed, the foreyard creaked back into position once more and the bucketful of salt water soused down over the gunner and his gun, putting out his linestock and wetting his priming. A shower of balls from the marines piped through the air or rapped up against the planks, but the boat was tossing and jerking in the short, choppy waves, and to aim was impossible. In vain the men tugged and strained at their oars, while the gunner worked like a maniac to re-light his linestock and to replace his priming. The boat had lost its weight, while the brigantine was flying along now with every sail bulging and swelling to bursting point. Crack! went the cannonade at last, and five little slits in the mainsail showed that her charge of grape had flown high. Half an hour afterward a little dark dot upon the horizon with a golden speck at one end of it was all that could be seen of the Honfleur guard boat. The smoke of Havre lay like a little cloud upon the northern horizon, and Captain Ephraim Savage paced his deck with his face as grim as ever, but with a dancing light in his gray eyes.

Fighters Who Fight Hard But Square

Edward Peple in his story "A Tooth for a Tooth" published in The American Magazine for December, reports an extraordinary amusing and yet significant fight between an English nobleman and a Kentuckian. The two opponents faced each other silently, two atoms of two great nations which surpass the balance of the world in bull-dog grit and courteous justice to an enemy.

"Mister," said the Kentuckian, "as 'nigh you was wet an' cole; you want in no condition for a satisfactory fight, an' this mornin' we both might of punched you then, but I ain't the man to take advantage of a feller critter an' bloody his nose on a empty stomach."

"Lord Cranston's look of admiration visibly increased."

"By George, your's a brick," he laughed, "and as for your just desire to lick me it's most unkind in a gentleman to keep you waiting." He rose and began to divest himself of superfluous clothing, but paused at a sudden thought, with his vest half off. "Look here," he said, "you've been a ripping chivalier in your code of honor, and it's only fair on my part to acquaint you with a fact. At Cambridge I went in for boxing—strong. Since then I've kept in training, and am rather fit. Unless you are a professional, you know, I'm apt to prove a trifle nasty."

Each being assured that the other went into the scrap in good condition, and with eyes wide open, they proceeded to business—brisk business!

LODGE PROPOSES TO HEAD FORAKER

Suggests Amendment to The Brownsville Resolution

Ohio Senator Refuses to Recognize President's Right to Discharge Men.

VOTE ON MOTION POSTPONED

Washington, Jan. 5.—Consideration of the Brownsville affair, which is likely to be the sensation of the session, was begun as soon as routine business had been concluded in the senate after the reopening of congress today. An eloquent defense of the president's action in discharging three companies of the Twenty-fifth infantry and an attack on those who have assailed the people of Brownsville, by Senator Culberson of Texas, a personal defense of his previous utterances by Senator Foraker, and finally an important amendment to the Foraker resolution for an investigation presented by Senator Lodge, spokesman for the administration were the features. Consideration will be resumed on Monday, adjournment being taken today over Sunday.

The Lodge amendment took most of the senators by surprise and was objected to vigorously by Senator Foraker. If adopted as proposed, the resolution would read as follows: The words in parenthesis being those of the amendment:

Resolved, That the committee on military affairs be and hereby is authorized to take such further testimony as may be necessary to establish the facts connected with the discharge (by the president in exercise of his constitutional and legal authority as commander in chief of the army of the United States) of members of companies B, C and D, Twenty-fifth United States Infantry, and that it be and hereby is authorized to send for persons and papers and administer oaths, and report thereon by bill or otherwise.

Senator Lodge explained that he had no doubt in his mind that the president had the power to discharge soldiers, and so believed the fact should be stated in the resolution so as not to complicate the issue relative to the facts and evidence in the case.

Senator Foraker retorted that he had no doubt in his mind that the president did not have the authority to act as he had in this case, and objected to presupposing something that the committee might, in its investigations, have to pass upon. The matter rests for the present, Senator Foraker consenting not to press the resolution to a vote today, because Senator Lodge, who desired to talk to his amendment, was unable to do so by reason of a cold and sore throat.

Hughes Possibility.

Chicago, Jan. 5.—A dispatch to the Tribune from Washington says:

For some reason the inaugural message of Governor Hughes, of New York, seems to have stirred up Republican leaders here to an extraordinary degree, and the view was expressed that if he justifies the favorable opinion created by his inaugural he must be counted upon in figuring upon the prospects of the next presidential campaign. One of the old-timers in congress made up a list of eleven men, one of whom he predicted would surely be the Republican candidate for the presidency to succeed Theodore Roosevelt. His list included Gov. Hughes, of New York; Secretary Taft and Senator Foraker, of Ohio; Gov. Cummins and Secretary Shaw, of Iowa; Vice President Fairbanks and Beveridge, of Indiana; Speaker Cannon and Gov. Deneen, of Illinois, and Senators LaFollette and Spooner, of Wisconsin.

The Name of a Drink.

In the army, what your drink is called depends upon who you are—according to the author of "Emmy Lou," who in The American Magazine for December, begins a new series of child stories entitled "Lettitia, Nursery Comps, U. S. A."

"Now, according to the story," you call what is generally responsible for getting a private in the guard house, or to be exact, you did at that particular post 'pecos' or 'blind tiger's bite,' but when it happens to your papa (who is an officer), mamma calls it 'Scotch.'"

Further on in the story is this statement: "Privates and corporals get pinched, or get their belts pulled. Papas sleep it off."

These distinctions hold good in some well regulated families and communities outside the army!

The knowledge that the roses are so sweet vanishes the fear of the wounds from the thorns.

A HARD YEAR FOR SUFFERERS

Local Physician Gives Advice How to Prevent Catarrh

Make Some Up and Try It—Don't Cost Much and Is Said to Do the Work Properly.

A SIMPLE HOME PRESCRIPTION

Unless all signs fail, this will prove a hard season for those who are subject to catarrhal disease.

The coming months will be a harvest for the doctors and patent medicine manufacturers unless great care is taken to dress warm and keep the feet dry.

This is the advice of a well-known authority and should be heeded by all who are subject to rheumatism, kidney and bladder troubles, and especially catarrh. While the latter is considered by most sufferers an incurable disease, there are few men or women who will fall to experience great relief from the following simple home prescription, and if taken in time it will prevent an attack of catarrh during the entire season.

Here is the prescription which any one can mix: Fluid Extract Dandelion one-half ounce, Compound Kargon one ounce, Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla three ounces. Shake well in a bottle and use in teaspoonful doses after each meal and again at bedtime. These are mostly vegetable ingredients and can be obtained from any good prescription pharmacy at small cost.

The Compound Kargon in this prescription acts directly upon the eliminative tissues of the kidneys to make them filter and strain from the blood the poisons that produce all forms of catarrhal affections. Relief is often felt even after the first few doses and it is seldom that the sufferer ever experiences a return attack within the year.

This prescription makes a splendid remedy for all forms of blood disorders and such symptoms as lame back, bladder weaknesses and rheumatism pains are entirely dispelled.

As this valuable prescription comes from a thoroughly reliable source, it should be heeded by every afflicted reader.

RATE INCREASES ARE SUSPENDED

Order Is Issued to Inspectors And Local Agents

State Board of Fire Underwriters Complies With Position of Mr. Prewitt.

LETTERS SENT OVER STATE

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 5.—Secretary Snyder, of the Kentucky Board of Fire Underwriters, has sent to Insurance Commissioner Prewitt a copy of a letter which he has addressed to inspectors, local board secretaries and agents over the state, advising them of the suspension of the general increase of rates announced in June last at the Olympia Springs meeting of the board. Commissioner Prewitt was present at that time. Secretary Snyder's letter to those in the field for the companies is as follows: setting out the classes of property affected by the order:

Inspectors, Local Board Secretaries and Agents—This is to advise of the suspension of the percentage advances promulgated June 25, 1906, affecting the following classes: Boot and shoe factories, churches, colleges, and schools, flouring mills, furniture factories, iron workers, metal workers, paper mills, sawmills, summer hotels and contents, terminal elevators and contents, stocks of merchandise of all kinds.

Where specific rates have been made, or may hereafter be promulgated, the same must be collected without exception.

In cases where policies have been written under flat percentage increases, it will not be permissible to cancel and rewrite at the present published tariff; nor is it allowable to give rebates by indorsement on policies where the advance has been secured. Yours very truly,

CLAUDE F. SNYDER, Secretary.
